MARKETING IN THE DIGITAL AGE

The digital revolution has created tremendous challenges for businesses across the world. With the increase in velocity of communication, companies are now facing a new set of challenges, including faster consumer decision making cycles, rapid diffusion of product innovation and need for effective vigilance of consumers’ opinion. The digital age demands a fresh approach towards all the core areas of marketing, such as digital-native consumers, segmentation, product development, promotion, pricing, going to the market and relationship building.

Marketing in the Digital Age (MDA) focuses on effectiveness of marketing in the context of today’s evolving digital business environment. This programme enhances participants’ understanding of the current and potential impact of the digital revolution on one’s industry. The participants will gain exposure to approaches and frameworks employed by successful players in the field and an enhanced ability to manage company’s transition to the digital age.

BENEFITS

The programme offers deeper understanding of digital perspective of traditional marketing concepts. In this programme, you will;

- Understand opportunities and threats emanating from the digital age
- Review industry disruption due to digital trends and emerging business models
- Recognise digital and marketing tactics for product development (crowd sourcing etc.)
- Learn to devise new pricing and monetisation strategies for evolving products
- Assess the value proposition of going to the market via digital, social and mobile channels
- Understand the mechanics of social media and viral marketing
- Learn to manage integrated digital platforms and channels
- Understand and strategise for modern crises management in the digital age

SPECIAL FEATURES

- Digital marketing experts from the industry will also share their viewpoint on how digitalisation and connectivity has redefined marketing concepts and how the companies have incorporated these in their business models.
- One of the key elements of the experiential approach of the programme is an integrated project. The objective of the project work is to familiarise the participants with the tools and techniques prevalent in social media and modern digital marketing. This rich and vivid experience will allow the participants to immediately employ the knowledge and learning gained from the programme in a practical way.
