Leadership in a Virtual World
Live Online Programme
October 13 – 15, 2020
Leadership in a Virtual World
A LIVE Online Programme

In the context of COVID-19, organisations across the world are forced to operate in a remote and virtual working environment, which appears to be the new normal for the foreseeable future. Leaders and managers in organisations need to learn specific skills in order to be able to lead and manage their teams effectively during and post-crisis without any adverse implications for employees’ engagement, productivity and organisational performance.

PROGRAMME COVERAGE
The 3-day live online programme will focus on the following objectives:

- How to lead and manage work and teams in a crisis situation and a remote/virtual work environment
- Leadership styles needed to ensure continued engagement and productivity of team members during a crisis or remote working environment
- Issues of work-life balance and communication styles that must be considered to manage remote teams and work
- How best to understand and manage behavioural changes in response to the changing nature of work and performance expectations?

The participants will get an opportunity to advance their management and leadership skills in a remote environment through small groups, case discussions, and informal interactions, to explore best practices and new research, share insights, compare experiences, and try out new ideas with academics and practitioners.
