Performance of an organisation depends not only on having a coherent strategy but also on how managers at different levels understand and implement it. Magnificent visions and grand strategies cannot lead to success without their effective implementation across the length and breadth of the organisation. Real test of a strategy occurs when the rubber meets the road — when visions from the top either diffuse or clash in the middle of the organisation, when organisational goals either unite and focus or divide and distract the performers, and when everyday actions either propel the organisation toward its chosen destiny or push it into the wilds of disarray. If coming up with a great strategy is challenging, translating it into fruitful actions is daunting. Integration of strategy formulation and execution is the key to meeting all these challenges.

This 4-day intensive programme is aimed at helping executives understand the process of formulating and implementing business strategy in various domains and at various levels of organisation. It is specifically designed to help managers conceive and conceptualise an effective business strategy, formulate and translate it into concrete goals and tactics, and drive the whole organisation toward superior performance.
