Muhammad Abdur Rahman Malik

Associate Professor PhD, LUMS University

After completing an undergraduate degree in Mechanical Engineering, Dr. Rahman spent nine very rewarding years in the corporate sector. He experienced international exposure and worked on several important projects. During these years, he remained actively involved in recruitment and selection, performance management and training and development of employees. These opportunities provided him with insights into the people management side, for which he developed a deep interest. The desire to further explore these topics and the passion to contribute to society steered him towards academia, and he joined the MPhil leading to a PhD programme at Lahore University of Management Sciences in 2007. The extended coursework expanded the horizons of his thoughts, whereas the opportunity to spend time at Concordia University in Montreal, Canada, as a visiting researcher, honed my research skills.

He has a teaching experience of sixteen years (five years before PhD and eleven years after it) at undergraduate, graduate and doctoral levels. He has worked in higher education institutions in Pakistan, Canada, Malaysia and Morocco. He has supervised two PhD and seven M Phil students, and currently he is supervising three PhD students. He has received prestigious international awards, and his research has been published in top-quality journals such as the Journal of Organisational Behaviour and Applied Psychology. His research interests include Creativity, Motivation, Performance Management Systems, Team Building and Leadership.
